

This thesis investigates the advancements in renewable energy technologies over the past few decades and their implications for global energy policies. The importance of renewable energy in combating climate change.